Dear Professor Eisfiedd,

According to the agreements reached in our meeting on "The Limits of Pluralism" ,at Bielefeld, I announce you that I should like to deliver a paper on the limits of pluralism in Spain for the IPSA meeting in Paris, next year.

The paper would develop the ideas of my oral exposition at the Bielefeld meeting, including new developments of the Spanish political life.

Hoping to see you again soon, I remain yours sincerely

Winczorek: Non-capitalist systems?
Then what are they?

From a theoretical and political point of view, in order to analyze all political systems in terms of pluralism, I the eastern [redacted] a socialist or non-capitalist country we can see, from the outside, new forces, new contradictions, new social and ethnic [redacted] conflicts.
(Hélène Carrère d'Encausse)
In her book "L'empire éclaté" she showed the enormous importance of [redacted] diversity and contradictions and nationalities and ethnic minorities in the Soviet Union.

Yesterday, I was discussing with Prof Kuroda the quite different perception of the role of the Catholic Church in [redacted] capitalist countries (as Spain) or in in Latin America and in the socialist country (like Poland).

From a political point of view ~~the injustice~~ the pluralistic analysis in order to accept the injustice. Today, we must accept the existing blocks, the political freezing of the renewing trends in society and political institutions. In this case, theory becomes simply justification of existing things or pure ideology.

I want to make some remarks on Prof. Kulczycki's comments, because I think they go to the very heart of the questions we are discussing about.

~~Prof. Kulczycki writes~~ ~~Prof. Kulczycki~~ discusses the problem of the point of "world-capitalist" economy as a single economy, Prof. Kulczycki replies even more by accepting the term of "economy" as being ~~[illegible]~~ Consequently, he denies the possibility to use the concept of pluralism applied to these "economies", so reducing the concept to the analysis of the Western countries.

If so, I really don't understand what we are ~~discussing~~ about.

It seems to me, that the concept of pluralism in its complexity, is rooted in the direct ~~[illegible]~~ subjects of social life: participation, equality and public ~~[illegible]~~ open responsibility.

The acceptance of concepts like "economy", acting as a theoretical framework and the belief of the possibility of analysing societies or ~~non-capitalist~~ economies in terms of pluralism, ~~[illegible]~~ make impossible the development of a theory of pluralism, because it ~~[illegible]~~ ~~they reduce~~ the existing political world to the image of two main ~~[illegible]~~ social and political blocks. Prof. Kulczycki explains it very well when he puts the distinction between pluralism (as a reality of this part of a bipolar world) and coexistence (as the reality of the other).
