Dear Jordi,

I have noted in the copy of 'Participation' Autumn 1986, a meeting of the Research Committee on Socio-Political Pluralism in Barcelona on June 21-28 1987.

I believe that since Paris, I am a full member of the committee (I had thought so since Bielefeld!), but I have not received notification of this meeting. Can you send me further details?

Yours sincerely

John R. Robbins.

Dear Professor Robbins,

Thank you for your letter of December 16th, 1986. I also believe that you are a full member of our Committee and I took for granted that you knew already the general outlines of the Barcelona meeting.

As scheduled, the meeting on "Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism" will be held in Barcelona from June 25th. to 28th. The meeting will begin on Thursday 25th. afternoon and it will go on throughout Friday 26th. and Saturday 27th. in morning and afternoon working sessions.

All sessions will be held at Fundació Bofill, c/ Provença, 324, 08037-Barcelona (tel. 258 87 00).

The aim is to provide some concrete views on the relationship of nationalisms . and the effective working of pluralism, specially as regards the pluralist systems of western developed countries.

We will provide hotel accomodation (bed, breakfast and lunch) from Thursday 25th. to Sunday 28th.

We are not able to secure funds for travel expenses.

I hope that you will have the possibility to find financial aid for you travel to Spain and that you will join us in Barcelona. It will be a great pleasure for us. Of course it will be fine if tou could present a paper. If you could, I should like to have an outline (about 200 words) before February 1st. and a draft copy before June 1st.

Hoping to see you in Barcelona, I remain yours sincerely.

Dear Dr. Sole:

I recently read in Participation, the newsletter of the International Political Science Association, that the IPSA Research Committee on Socio-Political pluralism was holding a meeting entitled "Pluralism, Regionalism, Nationalism" in Barcelona from June 21-28, 1987. Since I will be in Spain at that time, I could possibly attend the sessions.

Could you please send me any information you have concerning this meeting, including a schedule and a list of participants if possible.

Dear Dr Tura

Thank you for your letter of 5 December, inviting me to participate in the IPSA Research Committee meeting on "Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism". Much as I would very much like to participate and to attend the session in Barcelona in June, I am afraid that in my new position it simply is impractical. May I suggest, however, that you might like to extend an invitation to Dr Luis Moreno who has just completed a PhD thesis under my supervision comparing the regionalism and nationalism of Catalonia and Scotland. Dr Moreno is currently resident in Torrejone de Ardoz. I am sure he would make a lively and effective presentation to your session.

I am afraid I no longer have a current address for Dr Moreno, but you could reach him c/o the Politics Department, University of Edinburgh, 31 Bucclouch Place, Edinburgh, EH8 9JT, Scotland.

Dear Dr. Tura:

I have noted with interest that the IPSA Research Committee on Socio-Political Pluralism is meeting at the University of Barcelona June 21-28, 1987. The topic, "Pluralism , Regionalism, and Nationalism" is of great interest to me. I have been researching these items in the context of the Pacific Islands and would be interested in reading a paper on an aspect of this topic at the June meeting, if the opportunity to submit proposals is still open.

As a very new member of the Association I am not sure of all the rules regarding proposals and meetings. Will my inability to communicate in Spanish prevent me from profiting from this meeting or reading a paper? In any event, I would be grateful for a response to this letter.

Sincerely

Estimado Prof. Pereira ,

Muchas gracias por su carta.

En respuesta a la misma quiero informarle que la reunión del Comité de Investigación del IPSA sobre "Pluralismo, Regionalismo y Nacionalismo" tendrá lugar en Barcelona desde el 25 al 28 de junio. La reunión se inciará el jueves 25 por la tarde y seguirá durante el viernes 26 y el sábado 27 en sesiones de trabajo de mañana y tarde. Todas las sesiones tendrán lugar en la Fundació Bofill, calle Provenza,324,08027 de Barcelona,(tel. 258 87 00).

El objetivo de la misma es aportar análisis concretos sobre las relaciones entre los nacionalismos y el funcionamiento efectivo del pluralismo político y social, especialmente en lo que concierne a los sistmemas pluralistas de los paises desarrollados de democracia liberal.

La organización asegurará los gastos de estancia desde el martes día 25 al domingo 28 pero no está en condiciones de cubrir los gastos de viaje.

La lista de ponentes y participantes está ya cerrada pero cabe la posibilidad de que algunos de los que en ella se incluyen no puedan confirmara su asistencia, en cuyo caso se producirían algunas vacantes. De todos modos, también quiero decirle que ya he recibido varias peticiones y que me he visto obligado a constituir una especie de lista de espera en la cual le incluyo. De todos modos le ruego que a mediados de febrero se vuelva a poner en contacto conmigo.

Dear Dr. Tura:

I heard from Stanislaw Ehrlich the Socio-Pluralism Research Committee workshop on "Pluralism, Regionalism, Nationalism" to be held in June. I would very much like to participate preferably to give a paper which I have prepared on "The Reality of Cultural Pluralism in the United States;" but also to interact with scholars who can guide me on my ongoing research on cultural isolationists and governmental accomodation. In addition to being involved in this committee I am Secretary of the IPSA Research Committee on Politics and Ethnicity and the work of the two committees overlap on issues such as the one being discussed here.

I await to hear from you.

Dear Professor Solé Tura:

Thank you very much for your letter of December 5, 1986, inviting me to a conference on "Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism," to be held in Barcelona, June 25-28, 1987.

I would be interested in presenting a paper at the conference but before sending you an outline of my paper I would like to clarify one question. In your letter you suggested that my paper should discuss the relationship between nationalism and pluralism with emphasis on Western industrial countries. While I would be prepared to do it, my major field of interest is not Western democracies but East European countries and I would prefer to write a paper on the relationship between nationalism and pluralism in Eastern Europe before and after World War II.

If that topic strikes you as too broad, I would concentrate on the post-World War II period. I think that there are some interesting case studies of that relationship in such countries as Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia, and possibly other countries.

I look forward to hearing from you and I shall send you an outline right after that.

Dear Professor

Thank you for your letter of January 21. I'm very pleased to know that you will come to Barcelona.

Concerning the topic at your paper I think that my general outline of the aim of our meeting can create some misunderstanding, as it seems to suggest that the meeting will be focused exclusively in the problems of western industrial countries. I apologize for it. The outline wants only to underline the main emphasis, but not to exclude other topics related to the main subject of the meeting.

So I want to make clear that the topic that you suggest is mostly important for the meeting and it will be highly welcomed. I don't think it will be to broad, but in any case I leave to you the decision about ultimate focusing.

Hoping to hear from you soon.

According to Dean Solé Tura's letter, the conference organizers will provide the participants with hotel accommodation during the conference. It is likely that I shall come to Barcelona with a friend and her daughter, and my question is whether it would be possible to reserve a hotel room that would accommodate three persons--two adults and a child. Obviously, I would pay for the extra persons.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Dean Solé Tura:

I apologize for the long delay in sending you the synpsis of the paper I would like to present at the June conference in Barcelona. I am sorry that the synopsis is longer than 200 words and I hope that despite this you will find it satisfactory. As suggested in my letter of January 21, the paper will deal with the interaction between nationalism and pluralism in Eastern Europe before and after World War II.

I have one more favor to ask of you. Following your conference in Barcelona I intend to spend several weeks travelling in Europe. Because of that I would like to come to Barcelona with a friend and her daughter, and because of that I would be interested in reserving a hotel room for three persons - two adults and a child - for the duration of the conference. Obviously, I shall pay for the extra persons. In January I wrote to Mr. Jordi Porta of the Fundacio Bofill, mentioning the above, but I did not get a reply from him and perhaps my letter got lost. Anything you can do in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Dean Tura:

In response to your letter replying to my inquiry regarding my participation in your IPSA Research Committee Meeting on 25-28 June 1987 in Barcelona, Spain, may I inform you that I shall prepare and read a paper entitled "The Philippine Moro Insurgency: Reflections on Political Pluralism and Religious Ethnicity." You may include me as one of your paper presentors and please inform me about your Committee's decision as early as possible.

If you feel that my paper will be very useful in your conference, I shall still appreciate any assistance from your side regarding my travel and other incidental allowances just as I am still trying my best to look for funds elsewhere.

You will find enclosed in my letter the summary of my proposed paper which you had requested from me in your letter.

With best wishes.

Enclosure.

Proposed Paper: "The Philippine Moro Insurgency: Reflections on Political Pluralism and Religious Ethnicity"

IPSA Research Committee Meeting on "Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism," 25-28 June 1987, Barcelona, Spain

This paper shall dwell on the Philippine Moro insurgency problem and how Philippine history has promoted it and how the country's experience in political pluralism responded to it. The Spanish colonial experience shall be looked at as the original cause of the Moro problem. How the creation of a central government in Manila and religious and social implications of Roman Catholicism promoted ethnic and political diversity in the Muslim areas shall be analyzed. Before an examination of pluralist party and legislative politics and how they respond to the Moro problem shall be made, the paper shall examine why American tutelage on U.S.-style democracy had not developed local institutions, even up to the present time, which could have responded positively to the strength of democratic political pluralism. The country's geopolitical considerations on its southern borders and its present source of fossil fuels impinge on the Moro problem.

The paper shall generally speculate on the Western experience and problems involving minorities (e.g. the Basque in Spain, the Irish in U.K., the Waloons in Belgium) and how national governments have used political pluralism to mediate economic, social, linguistic, ethnic and religious issues. I shall refer to the prospects of the Western European solution of multiparty system, proportional representation, and the autonomous region as instruments for achieving political pluralism. These topics shall be examined from the perspective of the political and economic coherence that are implicit in the sovereign national state.

Dear Professor Sole Tura

Many thanks for your letter of 5 December concerning the IPSA Committee meeting on 25-28 June. I enclose an outline of my proposed paper.

Perhaps you would tell me in due course (there is no hurry) whether you are expecting members to fly in on the evening of 24 June, or the morning of 25 June? If it proves to be more convenient, could you book the hotel for this extra night at my expense?

I look forward very much to our meeting?

Yours sincerely

Governments and pluralism in African States - outline

(paper by Dr. Philip Mawhood, University of Birmingham)

The states of tropical Africa, despite the differences in their current economic and social patterns, have passed through a process of state formation which parallels that of European countries such as Spain at many points, other than the time scale. Their regional and ethnic divisions are often ancient, but their national boundaries are relatively new and were imposed by coercion. However they escaped the common European trauma resulting from centuries of civil war between the centre and the periphery. They reached the position of independent statehood, bringing with them a continuous tradition of regional perceptions; 'nation-building' is still largely a task for the future.

The present central regimes, suffering from both economic and political weakness, use every instrument that is available to them to control their situation. The choice is based upon pragmatism rather than ideology. Ethnic affiliations can serve as a weapon against opposition groups, while 'ethnic arithmetic' is applied to the filling of senior posts. Political decentralisation may be a means of fragmenting the potential opposition, or may provide a way of co-opting its support. An implicit bargain is made with traditional authorities at many levels, giving them recognition in return for their assistance. A single political party can be used for popular mobilisation, while Weberian values are pursued in the bureaucracy in the attempt to conserve scarce resources.

Dear Dean Sole Tura,

Thank you for your letter of 5 December - which, forwarded from an old address in Greece, reached me only last week - inviting me to give a paper to the IPSA Research Committee meeting on 'Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism' in June.

It would certainly be interesting for me to attend the meeting. There are problems, however, about presenting a paper. Although I am currently very interested in nationalism, and am in fact preparing to launch a fairly large comparative study of the subject, the sort of nationalism I propose to study is not nationalism within states, but nationalism among states, particularly the anti-American type of nationalism. Thus, I doubt that a paper by me would fit in well with what you propose to do.

There are also practical difficulties about accepting your kind invitation. For one thing, it would of course not be possible for me to comply with your timetable, since the outline is supposed to reach you by today. Also, the project I am planning to launch will have no budget for conference attendance etc., which means that I would have to cover my fares, and other expenses not met by you, from other sources, which I am afraid would not be possible. Unfortunately, I do not see my way to attend the meeting.

With my best wishes for the conference,

Yours sincerely,

Carsten Holbraad

CULTURALISM AS AN ALTERNATIVE TO NATIONALISM: THE EXAMPLE OF WESTERN POLYNESIA

Jerry K. Loveland, Ph.D.
Brigham Young University--Hawaii Campus
Laie, Hawaii

Western Polynesia includes three independent microstates, Fiji, Tonga,Western Samoa, and the American dependency, American Samoa. Each has a relatively underdeveloped economy, which, however, typically satisfies subsistence demands. Each of these has a Polynesian or, in the case of Fiji, also a Melanesian population component which settled these islands millenia ago. The traditional culture thrives in each of these island regimes in a syncretic combination with selected elements of Western culture.

The political culture of these political systems only partially supports the notion of the nation-state as the prime focus of political loyalty as an all-encompassing, impersonal, sovereign corporate entity. In the period prior to the advent of Western culture, these island societies were segmented and genealogically ranked in elaborate hierarchies. They were essentially stateless societies, or extended families, in which custom established the rules whereby status was awarded. "Culturalism" as the system in which ancient cultural norms establish the boundaries, forms, and ideology of a political system is in these countries an alternative to nationalism.

Nationalism, as the ideology of a "nation" which supports the claims of a group to sovereign political power, is not well developed in the contemporary political systems of Western Polynesia. It has not supplanted the traditional order which was based upon custom and the extended family, and in which hierarchies were ranked according to genealogical connections. The prize goals of these traditional societies was status which was recognized by the awarding of titles, also ranked, to elite individuals. Conquest, intrigue, manipulative skills,and arranged marriages were other methods by which status was earned.

Modern electoral systems, however, also confer status on individuals, and it is not too unlikely that electoral contests will be seen more and more as a device to gain status outside of the traditional methods.

Dear Professor Tura:

Thank you for your kind invitation asking me to participate in the forthcoming session of the IPSA Research Committee meeting on 'Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism.' Unfortunately I cannot prepare a paper in the short time before the meetings, and so I will have to regretfully decline. I have a number of other obligations which leave me with almost no time to prepare a paper by your deadline.

Thank you for the invitation. I hope to attend future meetings, I trust that the Barcelona meetings will be a success.

Dear Prof. Tura,

Your letter dated 14th January 1987, unfortunately reached me 2nd February 1987 as such it was impossible for me to send my outline by 1st February as desired by your goodself Originally I had written to you on 20th December 1986 and normally it takes 10 days to reach a foreign letter. I am afraid for I might suffer and miss your Conference due to postal irregularity.

I am very much interested in attending your Conference. I will be attending the Sanfrancisco conference on Political Psychology from 4th July to 7th July,1987,where my papers have been accepted and I have been invited. I can very well make my journey via Europe and take a stop-over Spain attend your conference and enjoy your hospitality.

I am sending a Synopsis and an outline of my paper. If you so kindly accept it please send me an official invitation so as to facilitate university travel grant and leave etc.

Anxiously waiting for a reply,

With kind regards,

Thanking you,

Yours truly,

MAIN THEME - REGIONALISM AND NATIONALISM

PROPOSED PAPER - REGIONALISM AND NATIONALISM WITH REFERENCE TO IND

In my paper I would like to show the effect of the emergence of regional groups and political parties and ethnic conflicts influencing Indian politics and nationalism. I would like to make a case study of JHARKHAND PARTY'S Demand for a separate Statehood in India comprising portions of four states such as, Southern part of Bihar, Bengal, Orissa and Madhra Pradesh This Jharkhand Movement is getting momentum and inspiration from the decision of the India Government's sanction of separate Statehood to Nagaland and recently to Mizoram.

Originally, the Jharkhand Party was named as ADIBASI SABHA, (The word Adibasi means a Tribal). It was purely a tribal movement. For last ten years its base has been broadened by the inclusion of a large number of non-tribals and it has come to be known as THE JHARKHAND PARTY. For the last five years this party is divided into two wings - (a) The Moderate Wing known as The Jharkhand Party, (b) The Radical wing known as Jharkhand Mukti Morcha. Both these wings have their representatives in the State Assemblies and in Parliament.

I would like to show, (1) The position of tribals under Mughals and under East India Company, (2) How the tribals started loosing their land due to migration. (3) Diversity between Hindu and Christian Tribals - how far it is true or created by governmen to weaken the movement (4) Policy of Indian government towards tribals - policy of appeasement - upliftment of tribals. (5) Population figure showing gradual detribalisation, (6) The real cause of dissatisfaction among the tribals leading to the Jharkhand Movement etc. (7) This study in comparison to the recent GNLF movement demanding separate Gorkha Land. (8) Attitude of the Ruling Party and the Opposition parties, (9) Reservation granted to the tribals in jobs and educational institutions - how far implemented, (10) How far this Jharkhand Movement is justified.

Ranchi University, Bihar, India.

India is almost a subcontinent with a number of linguistic groups, religious groups and ethnic groups. It is a plural society with ethnic, religious and linguistic diversity. During India's struggle for freedom it was easy for the leaders to unite the people against the foreigners. Even there were rebillion by the tribals-santhal rebilion, Munda revolt as also by the tribals in the North East India and by the Pathans against the British. With the advent of freedom India reorganised the states on linguistic basis. But once agreeing to linguistic basis of states the new Indian govt. had to face two serious problems from Andhra and the Sikhs demanding statehood which the government had to conceede. But the problem remained so for as the tribals were concerned. The tension was a conflict between antagonistic social forces, the new elite seeking to promote change and move ahead with modernisation and those who strive to maintain the statusquo. The Indian social system contain inherent seeds of conflict and contradiction. The social change implied the conflict between the forces of vested interest mainly economic and also cultural and the progressive forces represented by the congress desiring change. In the Indian situation there was a cultural lag and cultural diversity and this imbalance caused maladjustment. There was conflict between the old and the new, traditionism vrs modernity. Psychological experiences being the reflections of social realities as well as their controllers are bound to be connected with social change. The most potent factor is the physical and social environment including the psycho-social value system. Next is the intricate matter of needs and goals and the next is the accumulated past experience, customs and traditions. In India the dominant force in the tribal region is for statusquo. Tribals are frightened of modernisation. So this tension is a general feature of India's psychosocial life. The resistance to change is there because the new value system has not been psychologically appreciated by the people for whom it is meant.

The tribals look with suspicion the attempts of modernisation by the government as it threatans their traditional life. In this conflict I would examine the case of the tribals of chotanagpur a place where I have been born and educated and I happen to be a Professor in the Ranchi University which is the Nerve Centre of tribal area.

Dear Professor Krupadanam,

Thank you for your letter of March 14.

Unfortunately, the list of paper-givers for the meeting of the IPSA Research Committee on Socio-Political pluralism is already closed.

I can include you in a sort of waiting list, but I can't guarantee you anything.

I am deeply sorry, as I think that the subject of your proposed paper is most interesting. I'll let you know if there is a change in the scheduled list of paper-givers.

Cher ami,

Je l'avais laissé prévoir à Hugh Thorburn il y a quelques semaines et j'en suis sûr depuis hier : mon fils va se marier le 27 juin, et cela m'empêche, à mon grand regret, de participer à la réunion du Comité sur le pluralisme, que vous organisez au même moment.

Le département que je dirige au CERAT travaille depuis longtemps sur la dimension économique de la Région (voyez le petit livre bleu ci-joint) et personnellement après avoir étudié les groupes à base de localité j'étudie actuellement les groupes à base ethnique. C'est vous dire que le thème « Pluralisme, Régionalisme, Nationalisme » me passionnait et que j'aurais bien voulu être avec vous pour en discuter fin juin (sans compter le plaisir toujours très fort de retrouver Barcelone ...)

Voudriez-vous examiner, je vous prie, l'éventualité d'inviter à ma place mon ami et plus proche collaborateur au CERAT, Pierre Kukawka, qui écrit actuellement un livre sur les Régions et la décentralisation en France ? Pendant que vous examinez cette possibilité, il va voir de son côté s'il peut se rendre libre à cette période ; il rentre juste de Valence où il a été rapporteur à la Conférence des pouvoirs locaux et régionaux réunie par le Conseil de l'Europe ... En tout cas, je vous le recommande en toute tranquillité car c'est un collègue compétent et charmant.

En vous redisant ma tristesse d'être dans l'impossibilité de participer à votre réunion fin juin, je vous prie d'agréer, cher ami, l'expression de mes sentiments les plus cordiaux.

Dear Dr. Solé:

We have previously exchanged letters concerning the IPSA Research Committee meeting on "Pluralism, Regionalism and Nationalism" to be held in Barcelona, June 25-28.

I will be able to attend these meetings. Please make the appropriate hotel reservations for me. I will be traveling alone.

Concerning my format participation, I understand it is well past your deadlines, but I would be willing to chair a session, serve as a discussant, or present a previously written, but not yet published paper entitled "Regional Vote Choice: The Spanish Case." I have enclosed a copy of my curriculum vitae to help you in your assigning of a task to me.

I look forward to hearing from you soon so I can make my final travel arrangements.

Sincerely,
