ECPR JOINT SESSIONS OF WORKSHOPS: BARCELONA 1985

GENERAL PRINCIPLES ON THE ORGANISATION OF WORKSHOPS

LOCATION: Institut Catolic d'Estudis Socials de Barcelona

ORGANISING COMMITTEE: Joan Botella
Jordi Capo
Jordi Porta
Eugenia Salvador
Joan Subirats
Josep M Vallès
Pere Vilanova

DATES: 25 - 30 MARCH 1985

A GENERAL ORGANISATION

1 The Workshop Committee of the ECPR is responsible for the preparation of the academic programme of the Joint Sessions, and for the supervision of the administrative arrangements. It decides on workshop topics and appoints workshop directors. It decides on the location of the Joint Sessions; negotiates with the host institution; and in consultation with the Chairman and the Executive Director, agrees the financial arrangements, including the level of financial support given to participants within limits of a budget voted by the Executive Committee.

2 Any scholar belonging to an institution which is a member of the ECPR has the right to propose to organise a workshop. A detailed proposal must be sent to the Central Services for consideration at the Workshop Committee meeting held in the November 18 months prior to the Joint Sessions to which it applies. The final decision on the programme is made at the Joint Sessions preceding those under consideration.

B ACADEMIC PREPARATION

3 The responsibility for the academic preparation of each workshop lies with individual workshop directors. In particular, workshop directors decide on the topics to be covered by the workshop, and select participants. However, in order to ensure that all member institutions of the ECPR draw maximum benefits from the Joint Sessions, the following guidelines should be observed:-

(a) Information to member institutions: the programme of the Joint Sessions is published in the June ECPR News Circular. Special pamphlets on the Joint Sessions are also published by the Central Services and are sent out at the beginning of October. Workshop directors are asked to provide the Central Services with a brief (6 line) summary of the plans for their workshop for inclusion in this pamphlet as soon as possible after being appointed, and in any case no later than 15 June. The director of the Joint Sessions is asked to let the Central Services have a preliminary social programme by this date also for inclusion in the pamphlet.

(b) Each workshop director should also send by 15 June to the Central Services a memorandum of 3-5 pages detailing the themes to be covered in the workshop, and requesting names of potential participants. The Central Services will then send details of all workshops to official representatives.

4 Deadline for Nominations

It is the responsibility of official representatives in each institution to ensure that all their colleagues are informed about the workshops. Nominations should be communicated to workshop directors as soon as possible, and in any case no later than 1 December.

5 Selection of Participants

5.1 Workshop directors are responsible for the selection of participants on the basis of their own contacts and nominations made by member institutions. To be considered, potential participants must currently be conducting research in the field of the workshop; they are expected to present a paper or a research document.

5.2 Where a paper is co-authored, only 1 of the authors should be invited to attend the workshop.

5.3 Scholars from outside the ECPR should not constitute more than 10% of the total number of participants, and their participation should be sought only where this is essential to the academic development of the workshop.

5.4 Workshop directors should endeavour to ensure that there is a wide spread of participants from all institutions. No more than two participants should be included from one institution.

5.5 Directors are expected to go beyond their own established contacts in the field, as such networks are often confined to either Northern or Southern Europe. Care should therefore be taken to publicise arrangements in the other area.

5.6 In order to ensure that the aim of the workshop is attained - namely the active participation and collaboration of political scientists of all levels - directors should bear in mind that anyone from a post-graduate student and above, working in the field of the workshop, is entitled to apply.

5.7 Size of workshop: the optimum number of participants in each workshop is 15. However in order to allow for the possibility that one or two people may drop out at the last minute, directors may initially recruit up to 17 participants.

5.8 List of participants: workshop directors should communicate the list of names and addresses of participants with titles of their papers to: participants in their workshop, Dr Josep M Vallès, Fundacio Jaume Bofill, Provenca, 234 principal, Barcelona 37, Spain., and the Central Services by 15 January.

6 Programme of Workshop

6.1 A workshop should be planned to last eight sessions (each session being a morning or afternoon).

6.2 A detailed programme of the workshop meetings should be sent by 1 March to all participants in the workshop, Dr Josep Vallès at the Fundacio Jaume Bofill, Spain and the Central Services.

7 Duplication and Circulation of Papers

7.1 Each participant is responsible for the duplication of his paper or research document and its circulation. These should be circulated before 1 March. A copy of each paper or research document, which should be printed on A4 paper, must be sent to each participant in the workshop. Five copies should also be sent to the Central Services.

7.2 Expenses will not be reimbursed to participants until papers have been received by the Central Services of the ECPR.

7.3 Provided participants express no objection, their papers will be made available to any interested members of the profession on request at a price covering the cost of duplication and postage.

8 Conduct of a Workshop

This is a particularly important point, as the quality of discussion and the satisfaction of participants with the proceedings, depend largely on the arrangements for meetings. The following points should be strictly observed:-

8.1 Proceedings: workshop directors are requested to appoint from among their participants a 'secretary' for each workshop meeting, to summarise the main points of the discussion. These summaries will be published in the ECPR News Circular.

8.2 At the first session, the Directors should take steps to identify persons whose English is likely to inhibit their participation in and understanding of the proceedings. They should take care in the seating of such participants to ensure that they are placed next to someone who can help them (preferably someone speaking their language). Directors should also give them every opportunity to speak or ask questions during the sessions, and check with them throughout that they are following the discussion.

8.3 Presentations should not simply be made verbally, but accompanied by written summaries of important points on the blackboard. Participants should also be encouraged to bring short, printed summaries of their talk as well as their paper.

8.4 If the Director is not himself to act as Chairman for each session, he should ensure that persons who do are familiar with the points 8.1 to 8.3 above.

8.5 All participants are expected to attend all eight sessions of the workshop.

C ADMINISTRATIVE (AND FINANCIAL) ARRANGEMENTS

The detailed administrative responsibility for the Joint Sessions lies with the host institution, which shall appoint organisers for this purpose.

9 Accommodation

Participants will receive information relating to accommodation and other arrangements for their stay from the host institution.

10 Finance

10.1 Individual participants are expected to endeavour to raise finance for both travel and accommodation from sources in their own country. Workshop directors should always make an application to an appropriate Research Council or Foundation for support for the workshop as a whole. Only on evidence that such an application has been made can the ECPR proceed to provide financial support for their workshop.

10.2 In the event that they are unable to raise such finance, the ECPR may make a contribution towards the expenses of participants from ECPR member institutions. Requests and queries relating to finance should be addressed directly to the Central Services of the ECPR. Any contributions made by the ECPR will in no case constitute more than half of the travel costs calculated on the basis of:-

(a) 2nd class train fare for participants located less than 1500 kms from the location of the Joint Sessions or petrol costs of a car, which ever is cheaper.

(b) Economy air fare for participants located at 1500 kms or more from the host institution. Participants in this category will be expected to take advantage of cheap flights (economy, minimum stay or night flights) which may be available.

10.3 A per diem grant towards the cost of accommodation, may also be made.

10.4 Offical representatives should write to the Executive Director by 15 February stating the number of participants attending the Joint Sessions from their institution and making a case for a claim towards their expenses. The mode of transport and approximate cost should be stated at this time. Financial support cannot be guaranteed for participants of member institutions who fail to do this.

10.5 The ECPR will provide financial support for no more than 2 participants from one institution attending the same workshop.

10.6 Any contribution from the ECPR will be sent after the Joint Sessions to the official representative, and on condition of the effective participation of the members of the institute/department. Participants wishing to receive an advance should ask their home institution.

10.7 Non-ECPR Participants

The ECPR is unable to make any financial contribution towards the expenses of non-ECPR participants.

10.8 Workshop Directors

Workshop directors are reimbursed in full for reasonable accommodation and travel expenses within Europe provided they comply with the provisos stated in 10.2 a) and b).

11 Fees

11.1 All non-ECPR participants will be required to pay a fee of £40. Workshop directors are responsible for asking such participants to forward cheques to the ECPR. Outstanding fees will be collected at registration.

12 Planning Sessions

Alongside workshops, Joint Sessions may include planning sessions. The principles of organisation are the same as those of workshops, except that the number of participants should not exceed seven and, with the permission of the Workshop Committee, they may last only 3 or 4 days.

JOINT SESSIONS OF RESEARCH GROUPS, MANNHEIM, GERMANY SEPTEMBER 1985

To: Workshop Directors at the Barcelona Joint Sessions

From: Professor K. Newton, Chairman, ECPR Research Board

The 1985 Joint Sessions of Research Groups will be held at the University of Mannheim early in September 1985. It is envisaged that about five groups, each with approximately five participants, will attend the Sessions, together with members of the ECPR Research Board.

The purpose of the Research Sessions is to enable people to come together to work intensively on a research proposal. They should, at the end of their meeting, have reached some agreement on the main research question(s) they want to ask, the theoretical questions they want to tackle, the methodology they want to employ, a likely timetable for the project, and a set of probable participants, along with a rough budget. In other words, the outcome of a research session should be an outline of a research proposal, which, when tidied up, could be sent to a funding body.

In the past ECPR workshops have generated collaborative research projects, and indeed the workshops provided a natural forum for the initiation of such cross-national, comparative work. If there is a representative group of participants within your workshop which is willing to make the more long-term commitment to an European research group, they should submit a proposal during the Joint Sessions, but in good time for the meeting of the Reseach Board in Barcelona on Saturday 30th March.

Proposals need not be long and detailed, but they should contain enough information to enable the Research Board to make decisions about the likely prospects for a project. Five to six pages of A4 is adequate, but it would be helpful if some information on the following were included:

1. The main concern of the project
2. Its likely methods
3. Its relevance to existing literature and theory (if any)
4. A list of possible participants in the Research Sessions, who should be drawn from at least three different European countries
5. A rough budget
6. The name of a co-ordinator who will be responsible for organising the group and liaising with the ECPR

Successful applicants will be invited to convene a research group at the Mannheim Sessions, and provided that their draft proposal is acceptable to the Research Board, the ECPR will do what it can to help with the financing of the project, by sponsoring approaches to funding bodies.

Costs at Mannheim should not be high, and the Consortium will make a substantial contribution to the expenses of participants.

Proposals submitted during the Barcelona Joint Sessions should be given to Professor Newton or to Valerie Stewart.

Executive Director: Dr. D. H. M$^{c}$ Kay

Executive Committee: Professor R. Wildenmann (Mannheim) (Chairman), Professor J. Blondel (Essex), M. F. Bon (Grenoble), Professor H. Daalder (Leiden), Professor G. Freddi (Bologna), Professor F. ## GUIDELINES FOR POTENTIAL RESEARCH GROUP CONVENORS

1 The ECPR is, as the very title of the Consortium suggests, very keen to promote and develop comparative research in west Europe. It does not have the necessary resources to finance such research itself, but it does have a small amount of 'seed' money to hold research sessions which are designed to encourage groups to come together to work on plans for comparative research projects. The research sessions are intended to complement the larger joint sessions. They are held annually (funds permitting) for three or four days, and involve about 2-5 groups of between four to seven participants each.

2 The purpose of the research sessions is to enable people to come together to work intensively on a research proposal. They should, at the end of their meeting, have reached some agreement on the main research question(s) they want to ask, the theoretical questions they want to tackle, the methodology they want to employ, a likely timetable for the project, and a set of probable participants, together with a rough budget. In other words, the outcome of a research session should be an outline of a research proposal which, when tidied up, could be sent to a funding body. If the outcome is a more or less complete proposal, then so much the better, but the main purpose of the research sessions is a general agreement about broad questions of research tactics and strategy.

3 As at the Joint Sessions, the ECPR will contribute approximately a third of the travel costs within Europe, provided that travel is undertaken by the cheapest reasonable means. Under distances of 1000 km, participants should take the train, for longer distances, they should make use of Apex or other cheap flight arrangements. Accommodation on a bed and breakfast basis will also be covered by the ECPR. Like the joint sessions, the venues for the research sessions circulate among the member institutions of the Consortium, and the meetings are usually held in the late summer. Participation is open to all ECPR members, but one non-ECPR person may be accepted for any given research group.

4 Applications to hold a research group session in 1985 should be sent to the ECPR Central Services at Essex not later than 4 February 1985. Applications can then be considered at the meeting of the Research Board during the Barcelona Joint Sessions.

5 Applications cannot be long and detailed, of course, since groups will not even have met, never mind done any research, but they should contain enough information for the Research Board to make decisions about the likely prospects for a project. In the past, there have been more applications than places, so the Board also needs enough information to make decisions about the allocation of scarce places. Five to six pages is adequate, plus a longer working paper on the research topic, if available and appropriate.

Some information about the following should be included:

(1) The main concern of the project.
(2) Its likely methods.
(3) Its relevance to existing literature and theory (if any).
(4) A list of likely participants in the research sessions, who should be drawn from at least three different European countries.
(5) A rough budget, so that the Board knows whether the proposal is likely to ask for a large or a more modest amount of money from a foundation.

6 Successful applicants will be invited to convene a research group at the sessions in 1985, and if they can then draft a research proposal which is acceptable to the Research Board, the ECPR will do what it can to help with the funding of the project. Research money for comparative projects has never been easy to obtain, and research money of any kind is getting increasingly scarce, but the Consortium has had some success in the past, and attaches considerable importance to the funding of future projects.

7 Lastly, if you have any questions about the research sessions, or need further information, please write to or ring the Chairman of the Research Board, Ken Newton, Department of Political Science, The University of Dundee, Dundee DD1 4HN, Scotland (phone: 0382 23181, extension 461).
